ENGINEERING TIPS

Again, you are being provided with links to some training tools used by the U. S. Fire Administration through its “Coffee Break Training” series. The information is of particular interest and value to the engineering and maintenance operations for your premises. Your particular attention is drawn to the “Holiday Fire Safety” issue. This would make a good off-the-job-safety item. It could be duplicated and provided as a hand-out to all employees.

The other items are valuable in that they are materials the professional and volunteer fire service are studying. It is helpful to know the items that are being stressed as they will eventually be part of a property inspection. You can be better prepared and have the property in compliance with new requirements that appear from time to time in the U. S. Fire Administration releases.
